As a business, we have learned first-hand over our 75 years of providing labor support to some of the largest industrial companies in the world how important it is to pursue proactive measures and have a culture that believes and acts to protect all people from occupational health hazards. It is crucial in maintaining a company's productivity, reducing expenses, ensuring regulatory compliance, and minimizing liability while recognizing the most significant reason is that it saves lives!

In 2015, we branded our safety culture as Bsafe. We did this because we felt it was important to create an icon everyone in the Brock organization could quickly associate with our safety culture. Our primary motivation was to ensure we maintain a safe workplace, mitigating any risks that might prevent our employees from returning home safely to their families, friends, and communities.

The safety culture that has become part of Brock's DNA and permeates every level of the organization as it developed with time, experience, desire, and an unwavering belief that zero-harm is possible. This allowed us to accumulate the requisite knowledge and a talented, dedicated team of safety & quality professionals that tirelessly develop processes, procedures, and training protocols that has become Bsafe. The success of our Bsafe culture is ultimately due to everyone, from owners to management to field-level employees, believing that through respect and caring, we get better every day, and no one gets hurt.
